I am happy to know that Aaryamann Goenka, a student of Bombay International School has proactively taken up the cause of cyber-bullying prevention among teenagers.

Cyber-bullying has emerged as a significant concern in this digital age adversely impacting the mental health, academic performance and social development of the youth. It has the potential to affect the sense of safety and identity of youth, commending concerted efforts to address the issue of cyber-bullying not just as a technological issue but a social and psychological one, requiring collective efforts from parents, educators, peers and policy makers.

The work of Aaryamann Goenka, I am sure, will go a long way in addressing the issue of cyber-bullying. I wish him all success in his future endeavours.
